

Michelle Squire to be honoured by peers with OCASA Volunteer Recognition Award

A manager at Fanshawe College joins a long list of colleagues with OCASA involvement with recognition for volunteer activities.

Michelle Squire, Operations Manager at Fanshawe College will be recipient of the OCASA Volunteer Recognition Award for her contribution to the organization. She was named for her active role on the local executive of the Fanshawe ASA.

Since moving into an administrative role in 2005, Michelle has been involved in both OCASA and has exhibited strong support for the Fanshawe Administrative Staff Association, and has been involved in all areas of the local group of which she is now president.

In her 30-year career at the college, Michelle has worked in various support staff and administrative roles, has taught part-time in both Continuing Education and post-secondary day programs, and served on numerous committees.

OCASA is a voluntary, professional association which supports and advocates for Ontario's community college administrators, while building and promoting administrative excellence for the betterment of the college system.

Others to be honoured include Grant Meadwell of Fleming College, and Rick Helman of Loyalist College.

The OCASA Professional Development Conference, Leaders & Innovators 2014: Finding Focus in a Complex World, will be held June 23-24 at Kingbridge Conference Centre & Institute.
